

Port Dickson

The second smallest district in Negeri Sembilan, Port Dickson district offers an array of popular retreats for city dwellers seeking a relaxing beachside weekend not too far from the city. Once a coal-producing centre, today is more famous for its beaches and seaside parks.

The 18km stretch of beach on the coast of Port Dickson district is one of the few stretches of mangrove-free, sandy beaches found on the west coast of the peninsula. When people talk about Port Dickson, or PD as it is popularly known, they are most likely referring to the beach at Port Dickson town itself - a busy spot that attracts picnicker, swimmers, and those seeking simpler pleasures of a beachside stopover. But a short travel down the coast will bring you to one of the other beaches in Port Dickson district such as Teluk Kemang, Blue Lagoon and Cape Rachado.

Due to its close vicinity to Kuala Lumpur and easy accessibility for visitors from Singapore, Port Dickson has developed into one of the most frequented beaches on the West Coast. As a result, accommodation and food facilities are aplenty. Aside from the beautiful beaches, other attractions in the Port Dickson district include three golf courses, an ostrich farm, Pasir Panjang recreational forest and several historical sites such as the Lukut Fort and Pengkalan Kempas Historical Site.

Getting There By Bus

Kuala Lumpur - Port Dickson

KL at Puduraya station using RESTU bus service: RM6.15 one way, 2-hour journey

Kuala Lumpur - Seremban - Port Dickson

KL at Puduraya station: RM4.00 one way

Seremban at Terminal 1 using Park May bus service: RM2.50 one way, 45-minutes journey

Once in Port Dickson, you can get any of the local buses that travels the coastline route.

By Taxi

You can take a taxi ride from Seremban to Port Dickson which will cost you about RM25 one way. The journey takes about 30 minutes.

By Rail

You can catch the KTM Komuter train from Kuala Lumpur all the way to Seremban for RM5.70 one way. From Seremban, you can either catch a bus or a taxi to Port Dickson from Kuala Lumpur, take the North-South Expressway (south bound) and exit at Port Dickson/Seremban Interchange. From there, take the Port Dickson highway that will lead you straight to the beach.

By Car

From Kuala Lumpur: 60km

From state capital, Seremban: 30km